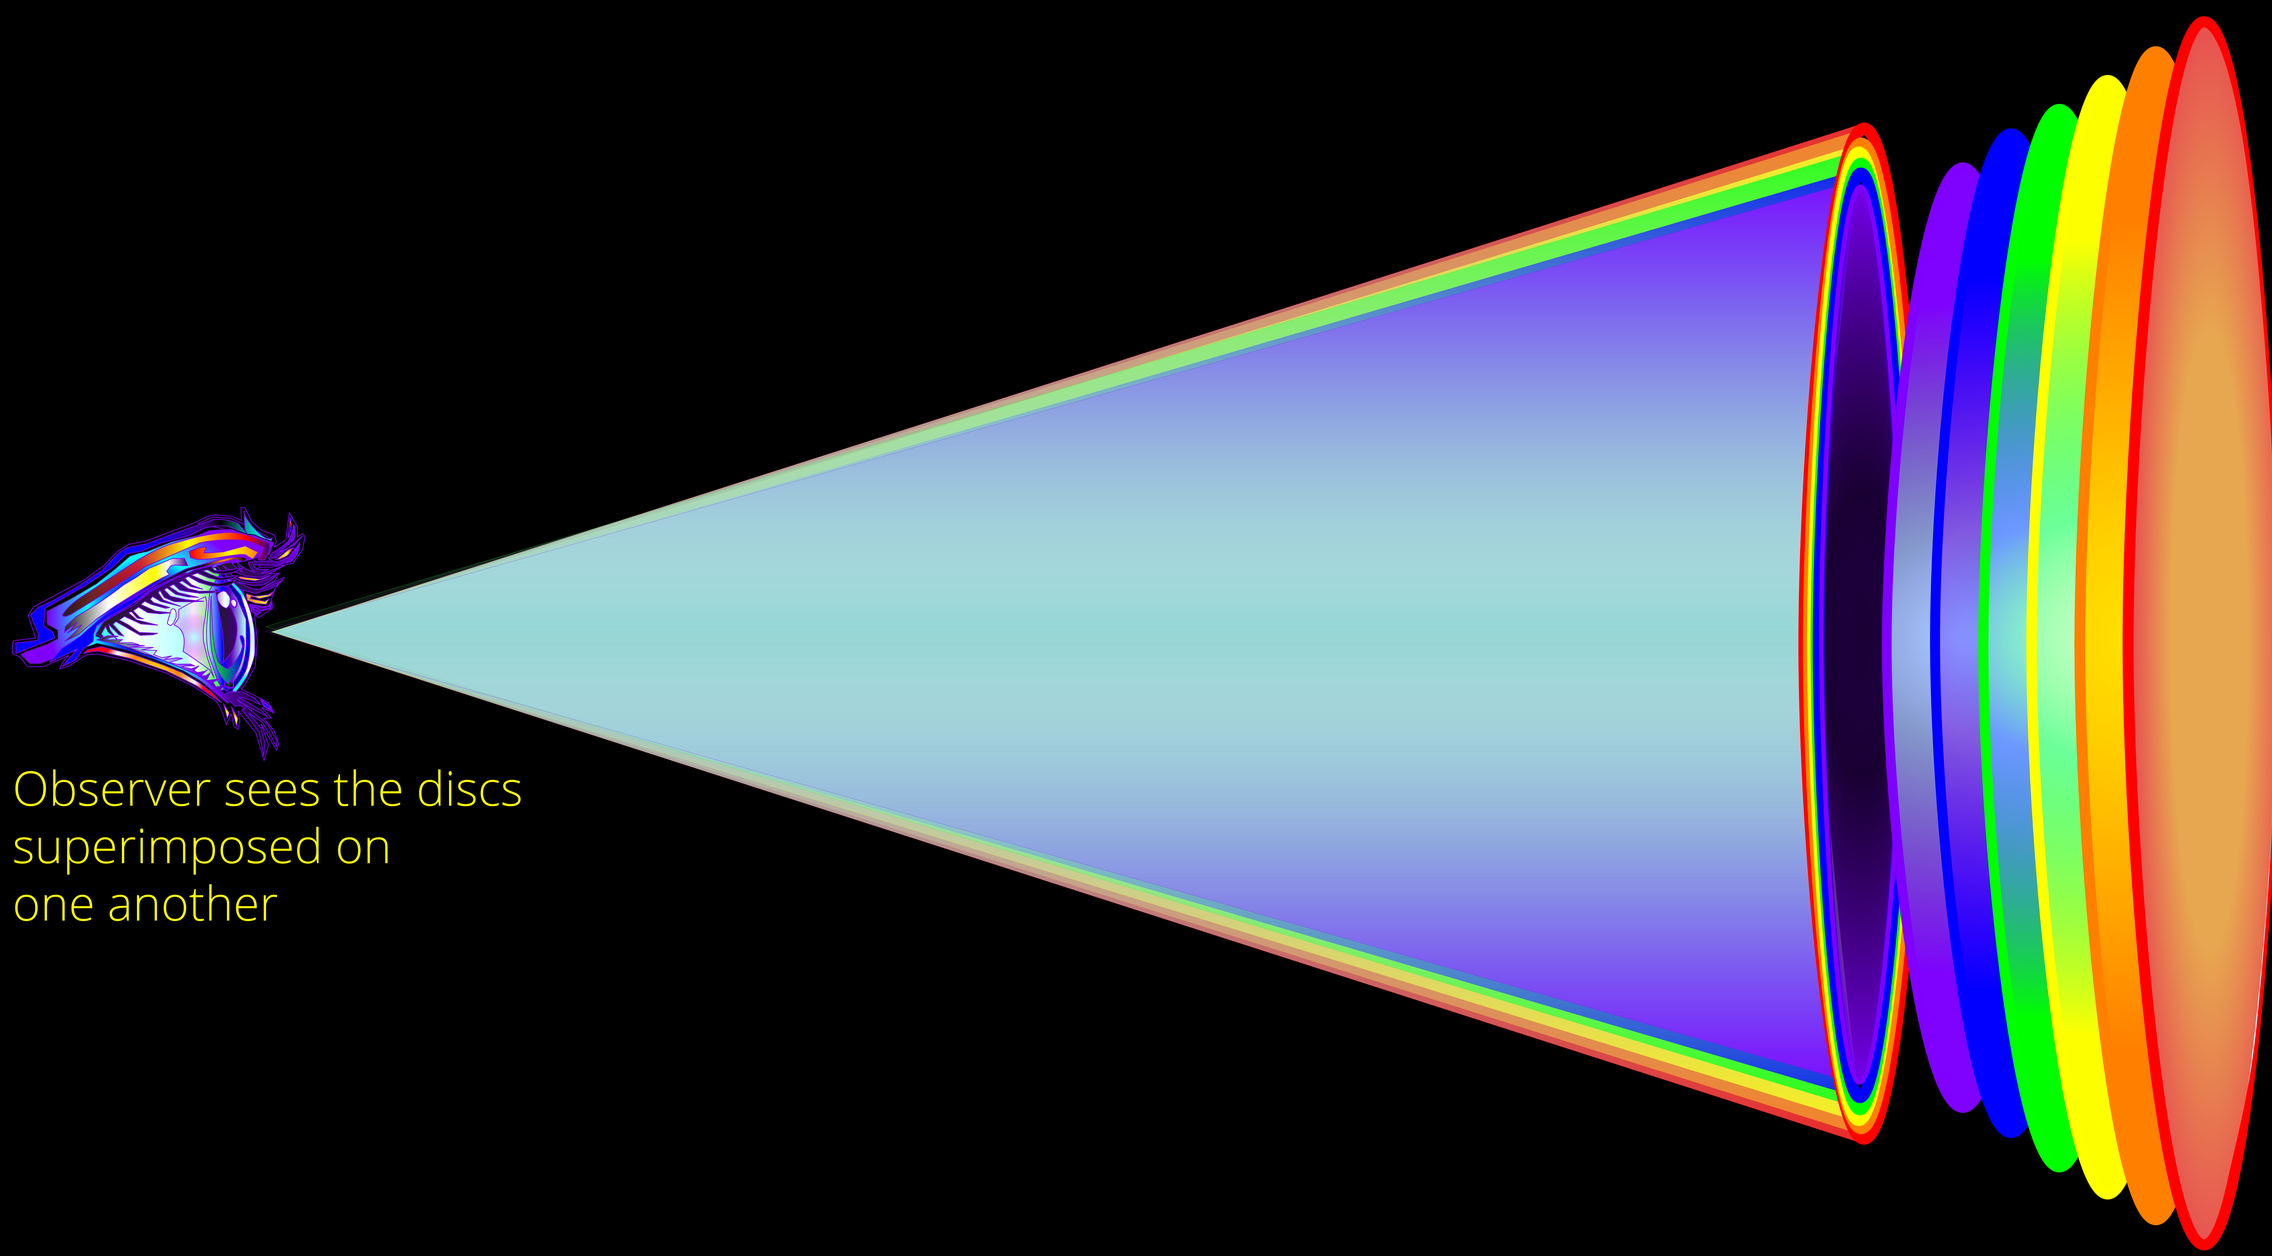
RAINBOWS AS DISCS OF COLOUR



A rainbow can be thought of as a series of coloured discs populated by falling raindrops.
The red disc has the largest diameter and violet the smallest. Each disc produces intense colour at its rim.